

Carolyn j Morris Explores Honeybees with Chick & Duckling

Chick and Duckling are back for a delightful segment discovering the fascinating life of honeybees. Carolyn j Morris continues the adventures of two companions in her Railfence Bunch series, Wildflower Beehives. Carolyn is a master of rhyme, rhythm, and repetition and children will be captivated by her whimsical and harmonious use of the English language, as Chick and Duckling explore honeybees, beehives, and wildflower fields.

Drawing on her experience as a Junior Kindergarten teacher and growing up on her family farm, Carolyn captures the delights of all the rich experiences and unravels the mysteries of honeybees.

'Busy, busy, honeybee, buzzing in the wildflowers.

Busy, busy, honeybee, buzzing for hours.'

Her melodic writing style will delight children and adults alike! Young children will be captivated as they tunefully participate while older children will eagerly read independently. There is an abundance of compelling facts for everyone.

Artist Richard McNaughton's captivating watercolour illustrations will ignite wonder and curiosity on each stunningly illustrated page.

Wildflower Beehives is a valuable resource for educators following Ontario Science Curriculum guidelines. Grade One students explore a natural environment. Grade Two students learn that animals grow and change throughout their lifecycles and that animals have distinct characteristics as students research animals in their local environment. Grade Three students begin to investigate the basic parts of plants and their specific functions.

Wildflower Beehives is a must-read for honeybee enthusiasts and the much-loved adventures of Chick and Duckling!
